

Department of Health Policy, Management and Evaluation

Message from The Chair

Since its development, the Centre for International Health has had a commitment to create meaningful learning opportunities for our students. Our health professional students as well as our research students have benefited from their engagement in the international health course electives and have learned, through comparative work, how to analyze the impact of different health policies across the developing world. As well a number of our research students have had the opportunity to engage in teaching health care policy and management to health care executives and policy makers from developing countries. These opportunities would have been more difficult to access were it not for the Centre's presence within the Faculty of Medicine.
